Description of this course:
In this class, we will seek to understand human happiness, travel motivations and the connection between travel and happiness. We will read some of the academic articles and news articles and watch videos related to travel and happiness. After then, in lecture we will analyze and discuss about those topics. The learning process will be facilitated through in-class exercises and discussions, videos and completion of assignments.

Objectives of this course:
Upon completion of this course you should be able to:

- Understand and articulate key concepts, research findings, and controversies in the emerging field of happiness and travel
- Explain the connection between travel and happiness
- Think about your own happiness

Evaluation and Grading
Class attendance: 30%
Assignment 1 (Midterm exam; Book Analysis): 20%
Assignment 2 (Final exam; Presentation about My Happiest Travel Experience in S. Korea): 20%
Class Participation: 30%

Assigned Readings and Lectures:
You are expected to attend every lecture and be an active participant in class discussions. Class participation is critical. By participating in class, you are engaged in the learning process, assessing the ideas presented, and shaping the focus of the class.
Class becomes more dynamic, interesting and rewarding when students actively share their ideas, objections, critiques, and questions.
You are expected to attend class having read the assigned material and be prepared to make comments, raise questions, and offer opinions on the comments of others. Although I will lecture, a large portion of time will be devoted to discussion.
I will periodically check to see whether articles have been read. Failure to read them will affect your grade.

Assignments:
1) Assignment 1 (20%): Book Analysis
Develop a 3-4 page review of a book relating it to the course concepts such as travel and happiness. A book list will be provided during the class. You must choose and read one of the books provided from the list. Detailed information on requirements for this assignment will be handed out later.

2) Assignment 2 (20%): My Happiest Travel Experience in S. Korea
Develop PowerPoint Slides related to your happiest travel experience in South Korea and make a presentation in class. Detailed information on requirements for this assignment will be handed out later.
